and not for purposes of trade. Even under the system of levy of foodgrains to come into effect from the next season, trade in foodgrains would not be free but confined to licensed dealers only. The public are, therefore, reminded that the movement of foodgrains for purposes other than bona fide consumption continues to be illegal and punishable under the provisions of the Articles of the Food Acquisition (Harvest) Order in force in the State. Notwithstanding the removal of restrictions on the free movement therefore, no free trade in foodgrains is permissible, since the clause in the Food Acquisition Order banning the sale of foodgrains except to Government is still valid and continues to be in force.
